

Warranty Policy

Manufacturer warranty coverage for material and workmanship defects. Warranty terms are set by the manufacturer and differ between Nike and adidas products.

Document ID: WAR-POL-004	Effective: January 1, 2026	Version: 1.5

1. What Is Covered

Both manufacturers' warranties cover genuine defects in materials or workmanship that existed at the time of manufacture — for example, sole separation, seam or stitching failure under normal use, premature midsole breakdown, cushioning unit leaks, or adhesive failure. Warranty coverage does not apply to normal wear and tear, damage from misuse or accidents, improper cleaning or storage, or alterations made after purchase.

2. Coverage Period by Brand

Brand	Warranty Period	Starts From
Nike	2 years	Date of manufacture (printed on the shoe's size tag)
adidas	6 months	Date of manufacture or date of purchase, whichever applies

The Nike warranty period is measured from the manufacture date, not the purchase date — check the size tag inside the tongue or heel of the shoe for a date in MM/YY format. The adidas warranty period is measured from manufacture or purchase and is considerably shorter than Nike's, so we recommend inspecting adidas footwear for defects soon after delivery.

3. What Voids the Warranty

- Damage caused by accidents, negligence, or misuse.
- Damage from improper cleaning products or methods (see the Product Care guidance for safe cleaning practices).
- Unauthorized repairs or modifications made outside of an authorized service channel.
- Normal wear and tear, including outsole tread wear, midsole compression from expected mileage, or color fading from routine use and sun exposure.
- Items purchased from unauthorized or unverified third-party sellers, where authenticity or condition at time of sale cannot be confirmed.

4. How to File a Warranty Claim

- Locate your proof of purchase (order confirmation email or in-store receipt) and, for Nike items, the manufacture date from the shoe's size tag.

- Take clear photos of the defect itself, and of the article/style number and date code on the product label.
- Submit the claim through your account's Order History ("Report a Product Issue") or contact customer support directly with your order number and photos attached.
- Our team reviews the claim, typically within 7–10 business days, to confirm the issue is a covered manufacturing defect rather than wear and tear or damage.
- Approved claims are resolved with a replacement, repair, or refund, at our discretion and consistent with what the manufacturer's warranty program offers for that brand.

5. Replacement, Repair, or Refund

Depending on the defect and current stock, an approved warranty claim is resolved with a replacement pair of the same model and size, a repair where practical, or a refund/store credit issued via gift card if the original model is no longer available. You do not need the original packaging to file a warranty claim, though having it can speed up processing.

6. Warranty vs. Return Policy

The Return Policy exists for change-of-mind returns and covers a shorter window (60 days for Nike, 30 days for adidas) with no requirement that anything be wrong with the product. The Warranty Policy exists specifically for genuine manufacturing defects and runs much longer. If you're past the return window but the item has a legitimate manufacturing flaw, file a warranty claim instead of a return.

Warranty terms and durations are set by Nike, Inc. and adidas AG respectively and are reflected here as accurately as current published manufacturer guidance allows; they are subject to change by the manufacturer without notice to this store. This document should be read alongside the Return Policy and Product Care guidance.
